

R-410A Certification

Technicians will need to be trained in the use of R-410A equipment for safety and because it has some characteristics that R-22 does not. The oil in R-410A is not hydroscopic so installation techniques are more regimented. A deep vacuum must be pulled to ensure that all moisture is removed and destructive acid is not formed. The HVAC industry will undergo big changes this year. It is important to plan accordingly and train appropriately to meet these challenges. This class is for EPA certified technicians only.
